Cabbage is an exception to most vegetable in being often too much cooked. It is whole some raw and makes a good Winter salad. With a snarp I nife cut the white heart of a cabbage across into the finest possible threads. Pile them in a light heap on a plater. Serve with vinegar in which red beets have been pickled or with a French dressing If the dressing is used, sprinkle it on the cabbage, mix well with a fork lightly and let is stand in a cool place an hour or two before serving.

Lemon or Orange Essence.

Essence of lemon or orange is made by ruboing the rinds of ripe lemons or oranges with loat sugar until all is rubbed off. Mix the sugar and rind together, and pack closely in little jars or glasses. It is used for flavoring drinks and desserts.

The Angel in the House.

Of Coventry Patmore's wife, the heroine of his "Angel in the House," it is said that she was a very lovely girl, clever, accomplished animated and sweet-tempered. A biographer says: "Her figure was tall and graceful Her dork hair was thick and wavy, and her large eyes, brilliant complexion and classical catures were remarkable. Her nose was a little too high, and after Thomas Woolne had immortalized her in marble, Mrs. Thomas Carlyle, with characteristic bitterness, said she was always trying to look like her medallion. She did not try to look statuesque; she could not help it. She would have been more beautiful if the outline of her face had been charming, for she had the brains and taste to make it practically comfortable as well as artistically beautiful.
